Temple University Hosts Annual RIMS Case Competition

Released: Wednesday, April 17, 2013

Malika Adams, class of 2004, Noreen Oswald, and Catherine Devoy

The Delaware Valley Chapter of the Risk & Insurance Management Society (RIMS) gathered in Alter Hall on Tuesday, April 9, 2013, for its annual case competition. Students from Temple, St. Joseph's and LaSalle Universities were invited to compose an 800 word essay on the following prompt: "In light of last year's extreme weather events, witnessed in the US and around the globe, do you think this pattern will become the new normal? How do insurers and risk mangers adapt to this changing environment?" The top three submissions, all from Temple University, presented their concepts before an audience of attending members of RIMS and were judged by Dianne Salter, Senior Vice President, Insurance, Jefferson Health System, Inc., Debbie Rodgers, Vice President of Global Risk Management, Aramark and Rick Graham, Corporate Director, Insurance & Risk Control of Crozer Keystone Health System. Samuel Heller and Colleen Guinan took third place, Kevin Henry and Charles Yerkov took second, and Catherine Devoy and Noreen Oswald placed first.
